The following account of this Picture was given by the late Mr. R. Udney in his catalogue. This lovely and exquisitely fine Picture being exactly the same composition as that in the palace Pitti at Florence by Raphael, which was supposed to be his original idea, naturally has led most people who have seen this to conclude it must be a fine old copy from that; instead of which, such documents were produced and are still existing, as prove the very reverse, and that Raphael took the idea from the Frate; and to satisfy the curious of this absolute fact, the following is copied from an account written by Consul Udney of Leghorn, relating particularly to this Picture, and that of the Holy Family representing the Taddei family, by Raphael. (See No. 165.) " Being particularly partial to the works of Fra. Bartolomeo, I made it my study to find them out, and examine them where they were to be met with. " The principal ones were collected by the Medici " family in the gallery of Florence and palace Pitti; " and some others I found by records in the family of

" the descendants of a certain Signor Taddio Taddei,
" who in his time possessed a famous collection of " Pictures, some of which still remained when I visited
" that house in the year 1778, though the greatest part
" had been sold before to many Florentine families. It " appeared that there had subsisted between Fra. Bar-
" tolomeo and Taddio Taddei a most intimate friend" ship, some time in the fourteenth century; that the " Frate painted for him on a square board (the corners
" rounded off within the frame) the Virgin caressing
" Jesus on her knee, and St. John behind with his hands
" clasped. It is remarkable that Raphael, when sent " from Urbino to Florence, was recommended to
" Taddio Taddei; and seeing in his house the above
" Picture, took from it the idea, and painted the " Madonna della Seggiola, now in the palace Pitti,
" which is in his last grand manner, imitating the Frate
" in every thing excepting the colouring, which is not " so high. These Pictures, namely, the Madona della
" Seggiola by the Frate, and the Holy Family by " Raphael, after passing through different hands, were " found by me in the house of the Marquis Albergotti
" (of Perugia) at Arizzo, near Florence, from whom I " bought them both."—" Nothing proves stronger the " esteem in which Raphael held Fra. Bartolomeo's
" compositions, than his painting this beautiful one of " the Madona della Seggiola, and indeed evidently
" studying him in many other instances," The above Picture was brought to this country at the same time the Danae by Corregio was, and has always had a glass before it. 2 feet 6 inches diameter within the frame.

Corregio - - 99 The DANAE; whole Figures, rather smaller than Life.

The following account of this Picture was given by the late Mr. Robert Udny in his Catalogue. The fame of this celebrated Picture is so generally known and well established, that is seems unnecessary to expatiate on its merits here, unless it is by transcribing the account giving of it by M. Mengs in his Life of the painter, for the satisfaction of those who may happen not to have met with it elsewhere. it is as follows: " M. Mengs describes it to have " painted by Correggio (on canvas) by order of the " Duke of Mantua, as a present for the Emperor " Charles the Fifth; that it formed part of that Em- " peror's Collection at Prague, which, on the capture " of that city by Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, " were sent to Stockholm, where that Monarch never " returned: that the Queen Christiana brought all that " Collection to Rome, which on her death was pur- " chased by the Pope's nephew Odescalchi, and when " in his possession an indifferent engraving was made " of the Danae. On the decease of Odescalchi, the " whole Collection was bought by the Regent of France, " the Duke of Orleans, and placed in the Palais " Royale. It is a known fact, that about the year " 1728, during a dangerous illness of the then Duke " of Orleans, son to the Regent, a bigotted friar, his " confessor, made the condition of his absolution the " ordering all the Pictures with naked figures in that " gallery to be destroyed; which was executed in his " presence by M. Charles Coypel, painter to the court: " he so contrived to cut the Danae in two places " without injuring the figures; and in four months " after, this Picture, with many others, was sold to " the noble Venetian Francis Lobia, as appears by " an original document in that family, where the other " Pictures remained, excepting the Danae, and in which " paper are specified the contents. That in the year " 1776, the Danae being stolen from that family, " recourse was had to the inquisitors of the state, " when it was discovered that the youngest of the " three Lobia's had pawned it for a considerable sum.

" That upon being called before the tribunal, he " confessed the fact, but prayed that it might not " return to the family as a token of a bad action " that he had committed, but that his brother should " be ordered to charge him, out of his part of the " inheritance, at whatever sum it might be valued it. " This being agreed to, and the Picture ordered by " the tribunal to lay concealed, it remained so till " the next year, when the young Lobia going to " Constantinople, made it over to the noble Venetian " lady Madona latti Minotto, his friend, who recovered " it by disbursing the sum for which it was pawned. " Whilst in her possession, she had it proposed to " the Empress of Russia; but having demanded ten " thousand sequins, the treaty did not take effect." After which, in the year 1780, it was proposed to Consul Udny at Leghorn, and, after much negotiation, he purchased it, and sent it to England in 1793; and it is now as pure and perfect as when it was first painted. There was in the Orleans Collection an old copy of it. In short, it may be said without the smallest exaggeration, to be the finest and most perfect work of the master now in being. 5 ft. by 6 ft. 4 in.
